- ▶ at any stage of the writing process, from brainstorming and outlining to examining a final draft.
- ▶ for any class in any department in which you've been assigned writing.
- ▶ to talk about your writing generally or to work on writing that's not for a specific class (eg. a poem or a law school application essay).

Some Feedback

- ▶ Adam L. was very helpful in my meeting. I was stressed out because I was feeling behind and overwhelmed on my paper, but he helped me to stay calm and work on a detailed outline that I can now use to complete my paper. He was a good backboard for my ideas, and helped me to structure them in the way my professor is looking for them.
- ▶ Emma is one of the best Writing Center tutors at Bentley. She really finds those errors that you would not have thought of. Also, when you talk with Emma, a lot of new ideas pop in your head as you discuss the paper. I thought my paper was good but she made it a whole level better. I highly recommend seeing her at the writing center.

Feedback (cont'd)

- ▶ I enjoy the technique of having the student step back and try to break down their writing along side the help of a tutor. I feel more confident in my writing skills even after one session! My tutor, Tara S., was phenomenal!
- ▶ Jesse was so helpful! I had never written a formal business paper and he helped me organized my thoughts and transform my simple sentences into sophisticated writing. He really made me brainstorm ways to improve my writing and I'm so happy with the final paper.
- ▶ My tutor was incredibly helpful and was able to help me through it without telling me exactly how to do it, so that I made sure to figure it out and maintain my own voice.
