Emerging Leaders Community

The Emerging Leaders Community is available to rising sophomore residents. Throughout their sophomore year, residents will optimize their experiences on their paths toward becoming effective and engaged student leaders. Following a leadership development plan, residents will develop their leadership identity, learn essential leadership skills and lessons, network with leaders from around campus, and participate in on and off campus programming opportunities. The style of housing offered is mostly four-person suites configured as two doubles or two singles and one double.

Students living in this community will:

- Connect and forge meaningful relationships with peers, staff, and faculty by participating in Defined Community events and programs.
- Develop essential leadership skills relevant to future careers and success.
- Engage in opportunities to explore one's own personal leadership style.
- Reflect on leadership interests at Bentley and devise plans to advance one's role within clubs and organizations.

I could not have enjoyed living in the Emerging Leaders Community more. The connections and friendships I developed have been incredibly meaningful. And making connections with faculty was an added bonus.
